Who mounts will fall, who falls may mount;

The Enormous Trade Done by At lanta in Horses and Mules. [Atlanta Constitution.] Soon after the war Atlanta became a gree stock market by reason of its superior railroad advantages, its admirable position as a distributing point for Georgia and the surrounding states, and also because of the enterprise of its local stock-dealers. The city has more than held its own in this respect. The other day a leading livery stable and stock yard man said: "I anticipate a great season in our business-a greater one than we had last year." "Has the business fairly opened yet?" No, but we have information which points to very large proportions for it. You see we have two seas as for horses and mules. Th horses come in during the months of August September, October and November. The mules begin to arrive in November, but busi-ness is not brisk until December. It continues then until April. About fourteen car loads of horses have passed through Atlanta in the last two or three weeks for points south and cast. Our local supply is just be ginning to come in." Which is the more valuable to Atlanta The mule trade by far. In fact, very few people know how big a thing it is. There sere 7,000 mules sold from my yards alone last season, and the city's trade goes to about 15,000 for a season. They bring mules here from Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana Missouri and liftinois. Atlanta is one of the best markets the stock-dealers in those states

"Who buys all these mules?" "They are distributed all over Georgia, both Carolinas, Florida and Alabama. Th Atlanta market is relieved principally by wholesale. There are jobbers in mules all through the south who come in here and buy them by the dozen, the score and the hundred and then peddle them to the farmers all through the country. You would be surprised to know how much speculation there is, too. The market is watched very closely, and there are men ready at all times to scoop up a good bargain for any number of mules." "What is the average price of a mule in

"Well, that is not an easy question. They are brought here from 4 to 7 years old. A 4-year-old mule already broke is worth from $125 to $150, though the best of a drove sell often for $200 or more apiece. Even averaging them at 8125 and you have for the 15,000 mules received here nearly $2,000,000.

Woodlands and Health. Boston Advertiser.1 Upon the hills of western Massachusetts re thousands of acres of land which, when first cleared, was sufficiently productive; but the soil, no longer held together by the roots of the trees, has had its lighter and richer portions washed out year by year, until its best elements have found their way into the valleys, leaving the hill farms sterile and nearly worthless. The change is evidenced by the ruined boures and half obliterated ellars, which are sadly abundant on the hills, indicating a population and prosperity in former time which would now be impossiide. In the vicinity of Boston, within my recollection, many fine tracts of woodland have been cut down for firewood, leaving barren, rocky hills, looking desolate enough without their once beautiful covering. If hose sterile hills, all over the state, could be planted with the best varieties of forest trees, and properly cared for, the value of adjacent lands would be enhanced, our streams would flow with greater regularity, freshets and low water would both be less mmon, the climate would be tempered, the xtreme of Lent and cold being less marked and winds less violent, the rainfall would be (Philadelphia Times.) Two almond-eyed celestials, dressed in the extreme of the latest Hong Kong style, took sents in a fashlonable Chestnut street restau rant yesterday afternoon. Two colored waiters at the further end of the establishment viewed them, but made no attempt at consulting their wishes. Having waited a mement, the younger of the Chinamen sharply struck the little table bell at his elbow. This brought one of the waiters to the table with a jump. He poured out two giases of water with a flourish, and said, stiffly "What you have, sah?" "Loast chlicken, flied potatees." "Tea or coffee, sah?" No wantee tea, stlawbelly and cleam. The waiter, with a surprised air, shuffled away to get the order. The Chinamen ate with the dessert they ordered a small bottle their dinner in a quiet manner, and when Mumm's extra dry the head waiter felt called upon to say something. As he bowed em out he remarked: Hope everything suits you, sahf "Yes," replied one of the Chinamen; "chlicken velly good, champagne velly good, but waitel dam blad."

Superficialities. [Chicago Times.] Most fathers know by this time that a diamond pin, a brown-stone house, or ever that highest test of respectability, an English log-cart, are not guarantees that a man will be a good husband; yet a large majority of marriages are made because of similar -riicialities He Earns His Salary. [New York Sun.] Rev. W. P. David is the supply preacher of the Neversink flats. Hurleyville and Fallsburg Methodist churches, Sullivan county. He lives at Phillipsport. In order to keep his appointments for service he leaves home at 3:30 Sunday morning. His first appoint-ment is at Neversink flats, twenty-one miles distant. He must be there at 9:30 in the morning to hold Sunday-school After that be holds church service until 11:30, and then W. E. STANLEY. a class meeting of an hour. He does not wait for dinner, but eats a lunch as he travels on. He goes from Neversitk flats to Hurleyville, a distance of eight miles, where he preaches at 2:30, and holds a class meeting at the close of the regular service. His next where he gets supper before opening service in the evening at 7:30. This meeting lasts until 9 o'clock, when the preacher starts for mail 9 o'clock, when the preacher starts for S. L. DAVIDSON, Free-Pres't. place in Fallsburg, four miles further on, home, twelve miles away, arriving there about midnight. He travels forty-five miles in the circuit. He is paid $200 a year for his Nothing Like Onions. [Chicago Times.]

A few years ago what is now the great be even larger. There are no other equally large onion tracts in the country.

Statistically Safe. [Chicago Journal.] The Massachusetts bureau of statistics states that in 1878 the chance of a person's eing killed on or by steam cars was one in 5,020,281, while in 1882 it had diminished to one in 20,927,034. This is less than the Buying a Buggv at any price, from $50 to $250, for the hance of being struck by lightning, and much less than that of being injured by a kerosene lamp explosion.
